About This Game

Akagi Ai is unexpectedly stabbed on her way home from school. She finds her spirit possessing her body from earlier that day, and must collaborate with the past self that inhabits her body to discover why she keeps dying -- and why she keeps coming back. Along the way, she becomes entangled with mysterious goings-on that have entrapped her friends.

Manna for our Malices is a decision-heavy visual novel with branching, time loops, and scenes that unlock progressively as you uncover new clues.

Every time I die, I go back in time I have died 12 times.

Tomoe Aoi is my best friend. We've known each other since we were little kids. In the science clubroom after school, I found a notebook with a weird scientific paper and a picture of Aoi's parents winning the ZPrize in 1993. The notebook wasn't in the room at lunchtime, when I went with Mimi. Officially, the 1993 ZPrize ceremony was cancelled. There was a bomb threat, and journalists in particular weren't allowed in. However, since there was controversy related to illegal human germline research beforehand, some people suspect a coverup and a media blackout. The reason Aoi was in the science clubroom after school was to pick up the notebook. Presumably, she also brought it in. The paper that Aoi's parents won the award for described a method for human cloning for replacement organs wherein the neocortex is disconnected -- keeping the clones mentally disabled enough to be unable to understand they are organ farms. That paper was sitting on one of Yomiyama Polytechnic's computers, where Aoi's parents currently work, despite officially not existing. It seems likely that they are still doing research along those lines, and that they're doing it at YomiPoly. There is an armed guard at the reception desk for YomiPoly's biological research

Tomoe Aoi is my best friend. We've known each other since we were little kids.

Kuroneko is a friend and classmate. She's a very good student, and even though she's pretty harsh, she's not a bad person.

Koneko is Kuroneko's little sister. She's a track star and very serious, and ADORABLE! I just want to hug her and squeeze her and take her home!!

Shironeko is Kuroneko's older sister. She's lazy and hardly ever comes into school, but she's super competitive and very good with computers.

I'm surprised at how much I actually like this so far. It's a visual novel horror version of Groundhog Day. I'm sure I was butchering the names but I really enjoyed following the story up to the point I'm at right now. You basically die at the end of every day and then the next day you try to make choices that will result in you not dying the next day. So, you may have ate lunch in the classroom yesterday. Tomorrow maybe try the library. Yesterday you cleaned up after class. Maybe tomorrow you try leaving instead. I can see how this could possibly branch out into many, many permutations.

I'm excited to see where it goes. If you're curious or you just want to see the game in action, feel free to check out my videos. I've only done one so far but there will be a series as soon as I get some more recorded:
